Management Report of Fund Performance (June 30, 2026)

Results of Operations

For the period ended June 30, 2026, the Fund had a total return of 8.8% (Series F).

The Canadian bond market, as represented by the FTSE Canada Universe Bond Index, delivered a positive return of 2.2% for the 6-month period ending June 30, 2026. The 10-year Government of Canada bond yield traded in a relatively wide range as investors weighed slowing economic growth, evolving inflation dynamics, and uncertainty surrounding global trade policy. The bellwether security fell as low as 3.1% in Q1 of 2026 before rising as high as 3.7% in Q2 and becoming more volatile amid higher energy prices and renewed geopolitical risks. It ultimately rallied and ended the period at 3.4%. The Bank of Canada (BoC) maintained its overnight rate at 2.25% throughout the period after completing its easing cycle in 2025. Policymakers balanced a soft domestic economy and moderating labour market conditions against a temporary rise in headline inflation driven primarily by energy costs.

In the United States, the 10-year Treasury yield also traded in a wide range during the first half of 2026. From a low of 3.9% early in the year to a high of 4.7% in May before settling at 4.4% as of June 30, 2026. As in Canada, bond market volatility was pronounced through the period, driven by the escalating conflict in the Middle East and the resulting shock to energy prices. Against that backdrop, the Federal Reserve paused its easing cycle, holding the federal funds target range at 3.50% – 3.75% across all four meetings in the first half of the year. At Kevin Warsh's first meeting as Chair, he took a more hawkish tone than was expected, emphasizing getting inflation under control. This caused markets to begin to price in rate hikes through 2027. Credit markets remained resilient despite periodic bouts of volatility. Investment-grade corporate widened modestly during periods of trade and geopolitical uncertainty but generally remained in the tighter end of the historical range. Strong corporate balance sheets and persistent demand for income producing assets supported market conditions. High-yield credit also generated positive returns, bolstered by relatively stable default expectations. The combination of attractive all-in yields and stable credit fundamentals created a constructive backdrop for Canadian fixed income investors during the first half of 2026.

The Canadian equity market ended the six month period in positive territory, with the S&P/TSX Composite Index returning 11.2%. The index rose to record highs in June, supported by strong earnings and resource-sector strength.

Global equities advanced over the 6-month period as the MSCI World Index (C$) returned 13.8%. The first quarter was characterized by sharp swings as turmoil in the Middle East impacted oil prices and nervousness among investors. The second quarter progressed as announcement of a US-Iran ceasefire framework and a memorandum of understanding (MOU) eased concerns about a broader regional conflict. Energy prices retreated and investor sentiment improved as fears of a sustained disruption to global energy supplies diminished.

The macroeconomic picture was more mixed. Canada entered 2026 with signs of slowing growth, and first-quarter GDP data pointed to a technical recession after two consecutive quarters of modest contraction. However, underlying conditions were not uniformly weak. Employment data improved in May, consumer activity remained selective rather than broadly distressed, and corporate earnings showed enough resilience to keep equity investors engaged.

Interest rates remained central to the market narrative. The Bank of Canada stayed cautious as inflation risks lingered, particularly with energy prices volatile and wage growth still firm. Markets increasingly priced out expectations for aggressive rate cuts, favouring a "higher for longer" policy environment.

For the period, the U.S. economy remained resilient but bumpy. Growth was moderate, supported by business investment in equipment, technology, and Artificial Intelligence infrastructure, while consumer spending cooled. Inflation stayed elevated, with persistent services pressures keeping the U.S. Federal Reserve cautious and limiting prospects for near-term rate cuts.

In Europe, while growth has not been especially strong, though it has proven more durable than feared, and government spending in areas such as infrastructure and defense has provided an additional tailwind. The European Central Bank (ECB) raised interest rates by 25 basis points in June given above-target inflation (3.2% versus 2% target rate) as a result of the energy shock caused by the conflict in the Middle East. The ECB also raised its outlook for inflation for this year and next and cut its growth projections.

Japan continues to benefit from stable domestic conditions and ongoing efforts to improve corporate practices. The yen continued to be weak over the period, reaching a near 40-year low versus the U.S. dollar. The currency weakness provided support for exporters.

Emerging markets performance varied widely by region. Parts of developing Asia have led gains, supported by strong manufacturing activity and continued investment in technology and infrastructure. Some commodity-producing regions have benefited from periods of higher resource prices, which helped support both earnings and investor sentiment. In China, for example, markets have been more subdued, reflecting ongoing concerns around economic growth and the property sector, even as policy measures have been introduced to support activity.

Within Canada, eight of the 11 GICS (Global Industry Classification Standard) sectors posted positive returns over the six month period. The best performing sectors were Energy, Financials and Utilities. The worst performing sectors were Technology, Communications and Materials.

Globally, all 11 GICS (Global Industry Classification Standard) sectors posted positive returns over the period, with Technology, Energy and Industrials being the largest contributors to index returns. The worst performing sectors were Consumer Discretionary, Communications and Health Care.

Over the period, the Canadian dollar weakened against the U.S. dollar, the euro, and the British pound while remaining flat against Japanese yen.

The Fund's multi-strategy structure combines complementary investment approaches. The underlying Funds are passively managed; however, the allocation decisions are actively managed, with positions altered based on relative opportunities. At the end of June, the Fund had an overweight tactical exposure to equities with a corresponding underweight to fixed income.

As at June 30, 2026, the total net asset value of the Fund was $108.91 million, an increase of 26% since the beginning of the year. The increase is due to net contributions and net investment gain.

[3] The trading expense ratio represents total commissions and other portfolio transaction costs expressed as an annualized percentage of daily average net assets during the period.

[4] The Fund's portfolio turnover rate indicates how actively the Fund's portfolio advisor manages its portfolio investments. A portfolio turnover rate of 100% is equivalent to the Fund buying and selling all of the securities in its portfolio once in the course of the year. The higher a fund's portfolio turnover rate in a year, the greater the trading costs payable by the fund in the year, and the greater the chance of an investor receiving taxable capital gains in the year. There is not necessarily a relationship between a high turnover rate and the performance of a fund.
